

Saturday 9th November to Sunday 10th November, 2024.

Saturday 9th November, 2024.

We caught a Tuktuk both ways to the supermarket. The language school held a Water Festival workshop. You would be proud of me; I ate shrimp and squid and ground rice (and sugar) and quite enjoyed it.

Sunday 10th November 2024.

We had a quiet morning at home (you'd think we'd be sick of being at home, but it is easy to fill the days up).

In the afternoon, we went out to Tonle Sap with the school. It is a good group of people and it was interesting to be out on the lake with local Khmer people. I wonder what they think about the idea of living in a floating house, where your sewage goes untreated into the water.

We saw the crocodiles, including some babies and the sunset. It was a good day.

Cows on the corner of our road. They are brought in by small trucks (powered by motorcycles!) and left on the vacant land to keep the grass (and weeds) down. They can wander nearly everywhere.

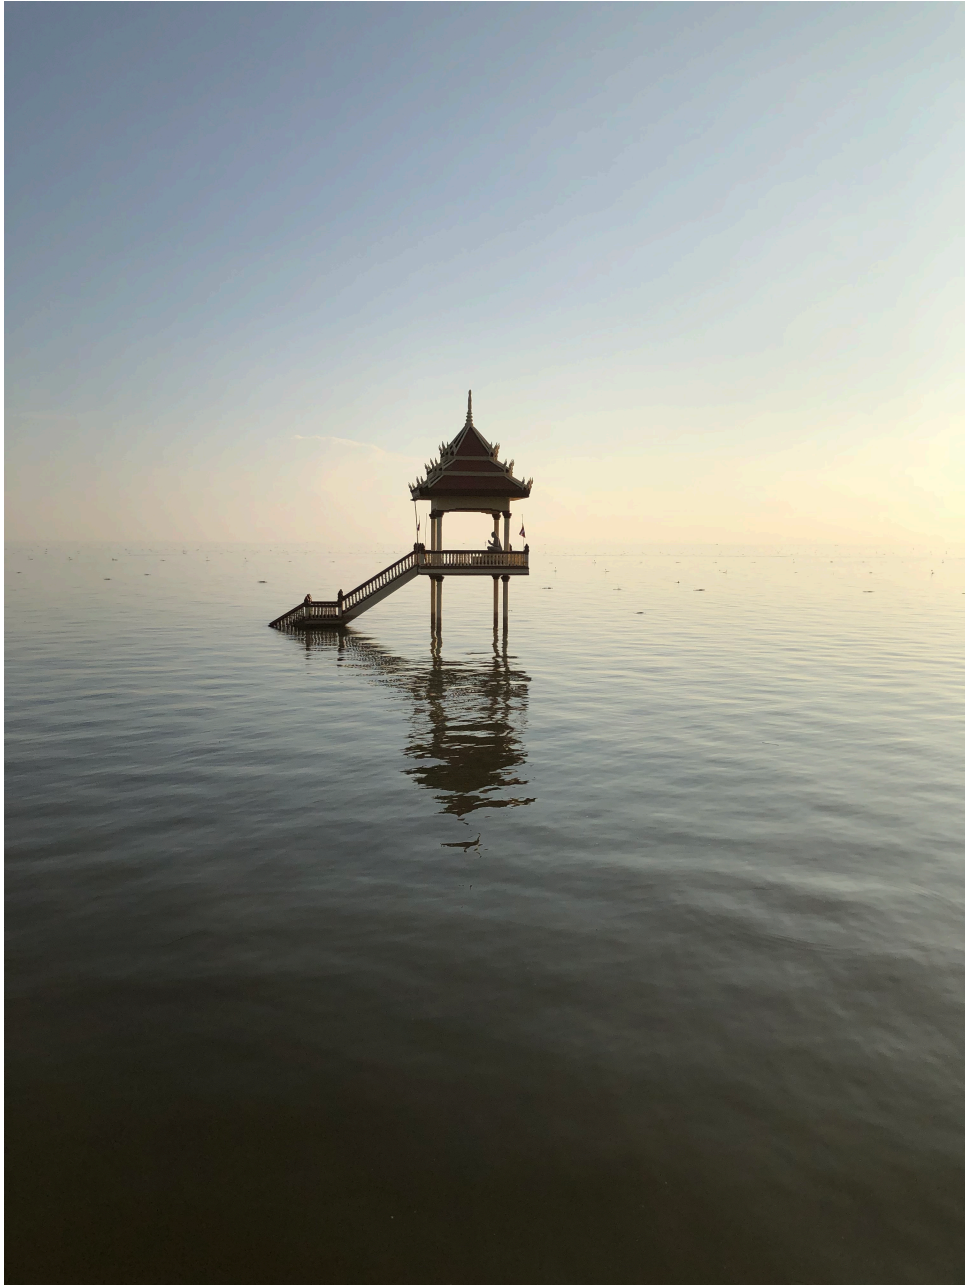

Have bicycle, will travel. This is the road to Phnom Kroam, which you can see in the distance. The Tonle Sap lake has filled up during the wet season and is now as close as ... perhaps ... two kilometres from the base of the mountain.

Various boats on Tonle Sap with Phnom Kroam in the background.

The sun beginning to set.

A small pagoda with steps leading to the now water covered ground.

Big crocodiles (not as big as Aussie crocs).

And little crocs.

Sunset from the roof of the crocodile farm (along the canal from the “port” of Chong Kneas).

We went home and ordered a home delivery of dumplings.
