

Thursday December 5th to Friday December 6th 2024.

Thursday December 5th, 2024.

Temple Day : Ta Nei.

David had a dentist appointment in the morning so we needed a small temple visit. Ta Nei is always a good temple to visit. It is well shaded, so even on the hottest days, it offers some relief. It is just off the “Short Circuit” Route around the temple, so not too far to ride and you can walk around it in about 30 minutes (or stay as long as you like). It rarely has many visitors.

An overcast sky takes the colour out of the trees and the sandstone blocks.

We met this friendly fellow in the completely dry moat at Ta Nei.

Small eastern gopura at Ta Nei.

At Ta Nei, we headed East (through the gopura) along a very overgrown path (the workers haven't been clearing around the temples as much this year as they did last year). There are some sandstone blocks and steps about 80 meters from the East gopura.

In these weeds, there were many small, pretty flowers. The flowers attract the insects. There were too many (and they were too quick) for us to photograph them all.

Is this guy biting his fingernails?

Thursday afternoons means language class. The new school is a much newer building and is nearer our apartment.

Friday December 6th, 2024.

Temple Day : Krol Ko (opposite Neak Poan).

This is a small temple complex. The water in the moat means lovely reflections.

Krol Ko Temple

Seated figure carved at Krol Ko.

More seated figures, praying.

Weather worn elephant at Krol Ko.

It was a quick visit, so we dropped in to Leak Neang (near Pre Rup) too.

Leak Neang was also overgrown. And one of the insects got inside my shirt and managed to bite my shoulder. It was painful, but didn't come up in a raised bump (it did itch and still does).

False door at Leak Neang Temple.

We had home delivery dumplings for lunch and then it was off to school for me.

The Friday free lesson was on transportations. Yes, they had the s because it was about more than one type of transportation!

It is good to see the regulars each Friday.