

Part 299 for Cathy's blog

Thursday 25th September, 2025.

Flooded (full) Siem Reap River, from one of the bridges near our apartment.

A big tree down, due to the very wet (soft) earth (on the way to the ticket check point near the South Gate).

Temple Day: Gate of the Dead, and walk to Victory Gate (shorter walk).

A shorter walk today, but plenty to see.

Somebody moved this rock with its plant.

Fungus.

Very pretty markings... looks like two moths.

More fungus.

Patterned spider.

Millipede.

Spikey bottomed spider.

Victory Gate in the sunshine.

Well camouflaged moth.

Gate of the Dead in the sunshine.

Back at home and it was time to organise the washing to make sure we had the clothes we needed clean and dry.

Friday 26th September, 2025.

We walked to Psa Kroam, to buy cross stitch kits. There is a limited choice (lots with picture of Angkor Wat) but they are cheap (imported from China, I expect).

Saturday 27th September, 2025.

We did not go to the supermarket, because David has carefully planned for us to eat all the fresh food we have before we leave tomorrow.

We are almost finalised, with packing our clothes and packing up our “stuff” to leave the apartment in an orderly fashion.

I am airing off the last of the washing, as we leave tomorrow.

We went out for tea, Greek, one of our special restaurants.

It is Grand Final day in Melbourne.

Sunday 28th September, 2025.

We were up and moving quite early, to be sure to finish the last load of washing (left on the rack in the bathroom) and ready for pick up at 7:30.

Australia (and our first grandchild) ... here we come.
